Madame. sule 12 1.10 Patey had again to sing five times. It seems these are the essest terms she can 8 0.75 make with a Hongkong audience. There was the usual clamour on the part of her Green Capsule 10 1.00 auditors for a sixth contribution. It apparently never occurs to them to consider that it is possible that even Madame Patey may get a little tired after five songs. In the aria from 'Faust' the great contralto was heard to great advantage, and the richness and power of her low notes were splendidly displayed in Rocked in the cra-

THE Governor's abstrac. statement of the military contribution question should have read thus:- To put the matter in an abstract form, if A is receiving a benefit from | Esq B for which a certain sum is fairly due, is he less morally bound to pay that debt because of a supercrogatory promise of increased benefit by C which has not been fulfilled.'. The whole statement hangs on one word-supercrogatory. The unofficial members and the Colony maintain that more was not promised than was asked and they do not consider that £40,000 is fairly due for the present benefit received. They voted the increased contribution because the promise of an increased garrison, and for that reason alone. There are two partially distinct questions before the Colony. The first is the payment of the second instalment of last year's contribution. This, we think, ought to be resisted on the ground that the vote was obtained on what cannot be considered as other than false pretences. Dogged resistance in regard to this matter is the natural outcome of the quirks of the War Department. The second question-really the all-important one and one which cannot be altogether overlooked in considering the first-is the justice of the demand subsequently made for the increased contribution on the basis of the present garrison or with the vague promise of Indian troops at some distant date. The unofficial members and the Colony will have to face this latter question, for, if the demand can be made, out to be just, even arbitrary treatment is no excuse for refusing, or rather continuing to refuse, to pay what is fairly due. This second question has, of course, still to be thrashed out, in spite of the fact that the vote has been passed by the officials.

WITH reference to the famous 'Card scandal' which is exciting great interest a correspondent writes to a provincial paper "The quidnance will not have to wait till after the Long Vacation before they can gratify their curiosity about the cardscandal. The case will at once be made the subject of a military inquiry, when the accusation will be sifted to the bottom. Mountime military and official authorities strongly condemn the conduct of men bearing high commissions in the Queen's Service who, having heard these allegations against the honour of an officer under their command, did not at once demand an inquiry into the case. This evasion of publicity would, it is said, have been impossible in any of the foreign Services. It is curious that people who are before and above all else 'men of the world' chould not have realised that in the present day the chances against successful husbingup are a thousand to one, that where ladies are parties for the scoret the chances are indefinitely increased, and that nothing in the world is so unphoular and so undignified as an abortive attempt at concealment.

THE 'NAMOA' PIRACY.

One subject is omitted from the report, and that is the Namoa piracy. No mention is made of this simply because it has never been brought before the Committee officially, but speaking for myself I think if the powers of the Executive were enlarged so that rendition to the Chinese authorities of all native criminals, not political, when ansave a very considerable expense, and I think authorities to take up more heartily than recent inflation were so kind as to smile. ENGLISH SEAMANSHIP. A representative of the Daily, News has had an interview with Sir Thomas Sutherland, the Chairman of the P. and O. Company, concerning the atatement made by Admiral Hornby that we want a much larger number of boys for training as seamen. He thinks they should be first trained in a harbour training-ship; then in a sea-going ship, and afterwards in a steamship of war, going eventually into the met-chant service with reservo Lay, so us to constitute a thoroughly efficient reservo. Sir Thomas Sutherland said :- "I should say that there is a certain amount of truth n the representation. We are not trainng so-many English sailors now as we ormerly did, simply because there are so few sailing ships to train them in. You can't make seamen of them on steamships. But a seaman trained on board a sailing vossel is the handiest man in the world. He can do anything that is wanted of him : while a man who starts on a steamship never becomes anything but a landlubber. But we can get along with them. They do -that is the best that can be said.

And you'really find Scandingviane and Dutch and others better trained and more amenable to discipline than Englishmen? Oh, yes; they get more opportunities for learning on sailing ships. And then, again, I fancy that Englishmen of the class who used to become sailors, now find more opportunities of making a living in other ways. It has always been so. English shipping has always been to a very great extent dependent on foreign scamen. They have always been soberer and steadier than

'Your own ships are largely manned by Lascars? Yes; we find, of course, that they stand the heat of the Tropics better than English sailors and they are easily managed. We have, of course, some Englishmen. We employ them at the wheel and for quartermasters. We have Lascars in the proportion of from two to two and ahalf for one Englishman. The cost is pretty much the same-I think, perhaps, a trifle more. We employ about two and a-half Luscars where we should employ one Englishman, and the cost comes to very nearly the same thing in either case. Our officers, of course, are Englishmen; but we never take an officer on board our steam. ships who hasn't been trained on a sailing vessels. We make no pretence of training

That certainly very strikingly illustrates your senso of the importance of the training for which Admiral Hornby is crying out? It does. And I may add that if the time should come when we could not find a sufficient number of officers so trained we should set up a trainingship of our own. We had one at one time, but it was hardly necessary, and we found it rather expens sive. I fancy,' laughed the chairman of the famous Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company, that we rather spoiled our
